Donald,

I can't help you anymore.

A little while back a guy from Canada named "Justin Seitz" contacted me and said that he's an investigator. He said that he's been in contact with your people but didn't name them.

I told him that all I know is that the evidence against you is impossible. All of it can easily be proven wrong. That would have to be done by your lawyer and P.I. I don't know how to get access to police evidence.

I told him that I don't know who killed Laura and I don't want to know who did it. I just know that you couldn't have done it. The evidence proves that you're innocent. Besides that, guilty people try to lie their way out of trouble, they don't tell the truth like you did.

I don't think Justin was satisfied with my answers, because he ended up saying:

"Either way, if folks in Kodiak don't want to give me information that's OK. I'll continue to turn up the pressure and me and my team will just keep doing what we're doing →"

But it's just going to make it uglier for people unfortunately and I don't mean for Mac."

I don't know if that "threat" was directed towards me personally or not, but some strange things have been happening lately...

I've also heard that Mike knows about me, and that some people seem to think that I'm not real?

I wasn't happy to hear that Mike knows about me. I don't know if he's a nice guy or a violent psychopath. All I know is that he has an impressive record. Most of the things he talked about in his letter made sense, but I don't think he knew everything.

Like he said, when something like that happens, the only people that know the details are the people that actually need to know.

If I'm fake, then why have I been trying to help you prove your innocence for the past year? And from what I've heard, the people that say I'm fake are also supposed to be helping you --- we were supposed to be on the same team!

I contacted Kerwin's nephew in Pennsylvania. His name is also James, so I thought it might have been his son at first. I asked him what Kerwin's son's name is, and if their family thinks Kerwin died of natural causes or not. He said he'd get back to me, but more than a month went by and I never heard from him again.

I sent an email to Officer John Palmer, and he eventually replied. He didn't sound happy to hear from me. I asked him about the 1993 murder he investigated that's still unsolved. The 30th anniversary of that case was in May.

He said that he doesn't think I'm friends with the victim's brother Jerry, and ~~that~~ thinks that I'm a journalist. He said either way, it's quite the coincidence that a woman claiming to be some kind of journalist recently contacted him about your case too... I have no idea who that woman is.

I asked him why he allegedly told two KPD officers and a Trooper that Laura had been put in a crab pot, taken out to sea on a boat, and dumped in the ocean... Contradicting the story that was used to convict you and Ibach.

He didn't reply to that question specifically, but claimed:

"In reading your first e-mail to my ex-wife I found many bits of information that you disclosed to be rumor and completely false."

Palmer was associated with P.I. Al Rubio who was supposed to protect Laura the night she disappeared, and lost sight of her on Cannery row. I think that March is a busy month for crab fishing.

Palmer seemed to be ~~overly~~ overly involved in cases involving murders and disappearances. But never really seemed to actually ~~solve~~ solve them... I've got more thoughts on that, but I'm going to keep them to myself...

I wonder if your lawyer can use state funds to get the tapes of the interviews that Rollie Port did with former KPD officers, or if he could subpoena them.

I've also been wondering if the folder in your van with the shoe prints on it, and "Laura's shoes" found out at Monashka still exist.

When a shoe is worn, it becomes as unique as a fingerprint because of the cuts they get on the bottom from stepping on small rocks and other things.

From the time Laura got out of your van, until the time she was kidnapped, she wouldn't have had enough time to drive to her apartment, change her shoes, and drive back to Cannery row in time for her kidnapping. So the shoes she was wearing in your van would have been the same ones she was wearing when she disappeared.

So if the shoe prints would have been compared with the shoes found out at Monashka, it could have proven if the prints on the folder were made by those exact shoes or not.

If they were a perfect match, that would have been strong evidence for the police. If they didn't match, it would prove that the shoes found out at Monashka were not the shoes Laura was wearing when she disappeared...

There are shoes on every beach in Kodiak. Some people forget them, and some randomly wash up from other places. Police couldn't call it an honest mistake though, since a bandaid was found in the left shoe, even though a wart had been removed from Laura's right foot...

Planting the earring in your van "officially" connected
Laura to your van. And planting the bandaid connected Laura to the shoes. The KPD officers that were dirty didn't think everything out very well. That along with the impossible timeline.

Sincerely
Cliff Anderson
